The three orchestral works in this Triptych can be either performed separately as standalone works, or together, as a symphonic cycle. If the whole Triptych is performed together as a cycle, the conductor can choose either to follow the chronological order of the pieces, as presented here (the primary order), or to chose any other sequence for the three parts. All the 6 possible sequences between these 3 works are viable possibilities creating sensible symphonic structures which are differing from one another, and give 6 possible architectonic structures to choose from.

The 6 possibilities are:

123 (primary order),
132, 213, 231, 312, 321.

Total duration of the cycle:
c.a. 35 min.

Notes:

- The aleatoric numeric figures are designed to be indicated by the conductor's baton-free hand (usually the left) in order to organise the aleatorics. Where the aleatoric layers exist simultaneously with measured ones, the aleatoric figures should be indicated at the exact place of the bar, where they appear in the score.
- The aleatoric models should be changed smoothly - when the next aleatoric figure is indicated by the conductor, every player should complete the model they play at that moment, and then proceed to the next model, rather than stopping in the middle and doing the change instantly.
- The whole section from bar 100 to bar 142, and bars 163-168 is constructed in a way, that the same metric pattern, which occurs in bars 100 -106 is repeated several. This is crucially important to be understood by the conductor and the players in order to comprehend the logic of the metric variety. The pattern is: 10/8 ; 10/8 ; 5/8 ; 7/8 ; 5/8 ; 4/8, and the internal subdivision of the metric groupings remains unchanged.
- Many melodic lines in this piece are inspired by medieval Bulgarian-Orthodox Christian Chant. These should be performed accordingly, restricting the use of vibrato, and without undue accentuation of the grace notes. The metric structure of the bars should not be underlined in terms of stronger first beats. The time signatures are only to organise the ensemble, but all the sections with dashed barlines should be performed as if no barlines exist, only infinitive pulsation of equal beats, continuing perpetually. The opposite principle applies to the section with normal barlines. In these sections the rhythmic and metric structure is of prime importance to the expressivity of evil imagery.
- Although this is not a programmatic work, it is inspired by the vita of the Saint Martyrs Elpis, Pistis and Agape and their mother Saint Sofia, and is also a contemplation on the values of Faith, Hope, Love and Wisdom (the respective meanings of the names of these martyrs) in the contemporary world.

Бележки:

- Алеаторните цифри са предвидени да бъдат подавани от диригента, със свободната от палка ръка (обикновено лявата) за да се организира алеаториката. На местата, където алеаторни пластове съществуват единовременно с метрично организирани пластове, алеаторните цифри следва да бъдат подавани точно на тези места в такта, където са разположени в партитурата.
- Алеаторните модели да преливат плавно - когато следващата алеаторна цифра е подадена от диригента, всеки изпълнител трябва да довърши спокойно модела, който свири в този момент, и след това да премине към следващия, а не да прекъсва по средата на фразата.
- Целият дял от т. 100 до т. 142 и т. 163 - 168 са конструирани така, че еднакъв метричен модел, появяващ се първо в т.100 - 106 се повтаря многократно. От голямо значение е това да бъде осъзнато от диригента и изпълнителите, за да се осмили логиката в метричното разнообразие. Моделът е: 10/8 ; 10/8 ; 5/8 ; 7/8 ; 5/8 ; 4/8, и вътрешното подразделяне на метрични времена остава непроменено.
- Голяма част от melodичните линии в това произведение са вдъхновени от средновековната Българска Православна църковно-певческа традиция на «Източното Пение». Тя трябва да бъде изпълнена по подходящ начин, ограничавайки вибраторото, и без ненужна акцентуация на украсенията. (Строго да се избегва кръчмарска ететика!) Във връзка с тази традиция също така метричната структура на произведението не трябва да бъде подчертавана. Размерите са означени само като средство за организация на оркестъра и всички дялове с пунктирани тактови черти трябва да бъдат изпълнявани като че не съществуват тактови черти. Само безкрайна пулсация на равномерни времена, продължаващи във вечността. Противно на това, в

(every desk has a separate and different part, therefore the number of the strings should be exactly as perscribed)

Notes:

1. The first section of the piece is designed in such a way that different layers of the orchestra should play in different tempi, as follows: Everyone should start together with the conductor, and then at every tempo change the orchestra should split - couples of wind instruments (2 Fl. Picc.; 2 Cl. in Es; 2 Tr. in C; Alto Fl.+Fg.; 2 Cr.; Bass Cl.+ Fg) should continue playing in the same tempo, ignoring conductor's tempo change, and everyone else, led by the conductor should take a slightly slower tempo. Every group of two instruments, which separates from the main body of players should play together within the couple in their own tempo (those appear enclosed in dashed rectangles in the score from the moment of their separation and have relevant indications in their parts). When the conductor indicates figure 1 everybody should come back under his control from that point on. Because of the nature of this structure, the score before figure 1 is not completely vertical - the layers in dashed rectangles do not sound together with the other staves, therefore the conductor should be aware that only the staves which are not enclosed in rectangles will sound simultaneously. The new couples of instruments which start playing at every new tempo change should play together with the conductor until their separation from the main body of players, as indicated.
2. The aleatoric numeric figures are designed to be indicated by the conductor with his/her baton-free hand (usually left) in order to organize the aleatory. Where the aleatoric layers exist simultaneously with measured ones, the aleatoric figures should be indicated at the exact beat of the bar, where they appear in the score.
3. The aleatoric models should be changed smoothly - when the next aleatoric figure is indicated by the conductor, every player should complete the model he/she plays at the moment, and then dovetail it with the next model, rather than interrupting it and doing the change instantly. The same principle is valid for the ends of the aleatoric layers, which in this piece are in pianissimo perdendosi, and therefore every player should complete his model in diminuendo on his own, without concerns about simultaneous ending.
4. Many melodic lines in this piece are inspired by the medieval Bulgarian-Orthodox Christian Chant. These should be performed restricting the use of vibrato, and without unnecessary accentuation of the grace notes (unlike folk music). In connection with this tradition also the metric structure of the bars shouldn't be underlined. The time signatures are only used to organise the time and all the sections with dashed barlines should be performed as if no barlines exist but only an infinitive pulse of equal beats, continuing endlessly.
5. Although this is not a piece of programme music, it is inspired by the history of Saint Archangel Michael and war in Heaven, and it might be useful for those, who will interpret it, to know that. See also: Revelation 12:7

Strings: 14, 12, 10, 8, 6 (All Double Basses to bottom C)

NB. 1. When 1st and 2nd Violins split into two staves, the front 7 desks of 1st and 6 of 2nd play the top stave and the back 7/6 desks - the bottom stave.

NB. 2. IMPORTANT!: Due to the unusually demanding nature of the Double Bass Solo in bars 26-69 conferred to the Principal double bassist, an optional Solo Cello substitution is provided, to be played by the Principal cellist, as notated in the Ossia stave below the Solo Double Bass stave, in case the Double Bass principal prefers to relinquish that solo.

The decision is to be taken in a discreet manner between Orchestra Management, the Player(s) involved and the Conductor, before the music parts are made generally available to all other orchestra players.

For these reasons this solo (b.26-29) is included only in the part of the first desk of Double Basses, (and Cellos), and not in the remaining parts. For both of these first desks two optional parts are provided: 1. with the solo, and 2. without the solo; to be chosen between both parts for each first desk depending on if the ossia will be required as a substitution of the first Double Bass solo or not - thus if the solo will be played on Double Bass, the first desk of Cellos should be given the part without the solo, and vice versa. (The second Double Bass solo (b.185-end) is not nearly as demanding, and is shorter, and should therefore not present itself as a problem for the Principal double bassist. If nonetheless that still proves problematic, for example if acoustics are particularly unfavourable, then this second solo should be performed by the full Double Bass section tutti. Therefore this second solo is included in all Double Bass parts.

If the Principal Double Bassist chooses to play both solos, but uses for the first one a smaller instrument that does not reach to the bottom C, then the final bars of the solo should not be transposed an octave up, but transferred to the Co-Principal who can play them on a standard instrument, reaching the pitches up to the bottom C, as notated.

If the Cello ossia option is preferred, the Double Bass principal should still play the final lowest bars (b.64-69) as indicated in the score, and included in the relevant optional part that omits most of that solo.

Ch. tutti alto

The first violin, after reading the figure 4 should completely realize the scale that in aleatoric mode sustain the last note, starting from it immediately, and extending it as long as is possible to reach the beginning of bar 238 together with the conductor. Hence the bracketed pulse on the crotchet, but the gissando shouldn't stop on it.

*Първите цигулки, достигнати алетория цифра 4 да завършат гамата, която свирят в този момент, задържайки последния тон, и започвайки глисандот от него независимо, като фермата да е толкова дълга, че всички да достигнат началото на такт 238 заедно с диригента. Глисандот да не прекъсва по време на фермата.
